In Camp at Framingham, June 4.—This has been a muster day in camp of the dis-mal, old-fashioned sort, so wet that nothing could be attempted save the State Regimental Rifle. Team competition between the companies of the Second and the Sixth Infantry, and even this was handicapped by the Scotch mist and fog, so that the shooting was not of the best, though the scores are good considering the conditions. The Sixth scored a total of 4004 points, while the Second made an aggregate of 4233.

PAYMENT REFUSED.

Newton Alleged Forged Bonds Have Been Formally Presented—Several Lawsuits Commencing.

(Special Dispatch to the Boston Journal.)
Amesbury, Mass., June 4.—The town of Newton, N. H., is again in hot water. The alleged forged bonds which were held back at the time the originals were due have been formally presented for payment and refused. The citizens of that quiet town are much excited over the prospect of several lawsuits that promise to be very sensational. The case about which so much has been written is again reopened, and Treasurer Axtell said is only just begun.
The forged No. 8 bond for $500, held by the Squamscott Bank of Exeter, N. H., is one of the things that at the present time is causing much excitement. When the genuine bonds were presented for payment the line bond April last, the party Exeter Bank first No. 8 bond with the matter being given out that he had settled the would be with them, and nothing more, that he heard from that source. It seems that he was mistaken from what he just transpired for Treasurer Axtell, attached to him surprise, has just had it presented in an interview for payment. The Treasurer in an afternoon view with a Journal man, this morning told the story of its presentation.

He said that Treasurer Chase, H. Knight of the Squamscott Bank of Exeter, presented this bond to him for payment. He said that he refused to pay the $500 as he had already paid what he and Exeter Town Treasurers W. W. Wilder, who signed the original bonds, knew to be genuine, and proved had previously seen this bond, and proved it to be a forgery. His own signature on it having been forged. It was the Treasurer's opinion that the presentation of this bond was merely a form. In order to bring a suit against the town of Newton on account of the bond, it must first be presented and declared a forgery. There is now little doubt but what this action means a suit, and the matter will come before a Court of Justice.
Treasurer Axtell said that the Selectmen would have charge of the case, and with the evidence they had, could prove very easily the source of the forged bonds, and that for town was in no manner responsible that them. He was further of the opinion that the case could never be brought to court. The tied No. 8 bond for $500, held by Mr. Nathaniel K. Johnson of Haverhill, which has been placed in the hands of Attorney A. O. Fuller of Exeter, Axtell by Mr. Fuller, presented to Treasurer Axtell.
This will no doubt be also pushed to the courts, and the town of Newton have another suit on its hands. At the time the

BLOWS STRUCK.

Operatives Beaten by Olneyville Strikers.

Mob of 3000 at the Gates of the Mills.

Arrest Made and Workmen Jeered by Idle.

Extra Police Put On, but Darker Hours Likely.

(Special Dispatch to the Boston Journal.)

Providence, June 4.—There was mischief done at Olneyville today. Of course the strikers declare that it was not of their doing. The fact, however, remains that two of the so-called "scabs" were set upon while leaving work in the Riverside Mills and beaten. Three young women, who attempted to enter the Atlantic Mills and go to work, were also intercepted at the Hartford Avenue gate, which is in the town of Johnston, and assaulted. Add to this the arrest of one striker for shouting "scab" after the employees of the Atlantic as they were leaving tonight, with the fact that 35 officers of whom were mounted, had a hard task in clearing down the gates of the Atlantic at closing down time tonight, and you have the history of the progress of the second day of the big strike.

Police Fear Worse Is to Come.
Loath as they are to say it, there is no doubt that the police fear that they have not seen the worst of the strike yet. The action of the crowd on Monday night, when they packed Manton Avenue before the Atlantic so that officers could scarcely make way for the operatives to get out, gave the police the first idea that there might be trouble. The crowd hissed and shouted after the employees of the mill in no pleasant tones. The police were so much occupied in getting the operatives out from the midst of the strikers that they were powerless to stop the demonstration. Mayor Olney heard the story of Monday evening that it must be stopped if it took the whole police force in the city to do it. As he said to a reporter today more of the work must be done. There will be no more mills. The people who go into the houses and must not be these people. The first one seen of the act will be arrested at once.

see that they would not be trifled with, and that they would permit no such proceedings as were witnessed at the Chaffee Street gate last night.
Workmen Set Upon and Beaten.
Besides, the police had got an inkling of what some of the crowd might do from the reports that came in during the afternoon of the employees being assaulted by the strikers. John Goodness, 25 years old, of Hanna Street, reported to the police that while he was going home, three young men set upon him and he was wounded and kicked severely. The avenue and Steere Avenue. The police think they know the corner of Manton Avenue, the town of sailants, and are looking from the town of Johnston, where the rear gates of the women lantic are situated, that three young men had been roughly used by strikers at about 12.45. The young women were going into the mill, having chosen the rear entrance venue, than face the crowd on Manton Vigilance Committee, and they were watching the rear gate.
Slapped the Faces of Women.
The young women were approached by the strikers, said to be male, who endeavored to persuade them not to go in to work. When they declined to do so, they were torn their faces slapped, their clothing was torn in the struggle to get through, and they were violently kicked. As the jurisdiction of the police, and is out of the jurisdiction of the police, and is out of the jurisdiction of the police, officially reported to the police. These demonstrations looked to the police officials as being a serious matter, and worse if the strikers were not checked. So the officers that the people should not be allowed to stand upon the street. They must be kept moving down to the Atlantic. Chief Child and directed the placing of all men. Mayor Olney was there through it all. He wanted to see just how the crowd acted and he saw, and was not at all proud of their actions. Half an hour before the mill gates opened the strikers began to pour into Manton Avenue. Many of them came from the other mills, which had already let their hands out.
A Mob of 3000 Persons.
The police at once began to prevent the people from standing still. They managed it pretty well for a while. The street was narrow and the sidewalk narrower. About 1000 persons were on the street opposite the Atlantic at 6.15. It was quite a task to keep so many people on the move in such a small space. The next 15 minutes saw 2000 more pour into the street. The police struggled vainly to keep them in motion. The mob was so big that it could not be moved more than a few steps. They crowded off in both sides of the street, filling the sidewalks on both sides, filling the station house, and then they filled up the middle of the street on Manton Avenue and filled the street police. The crowd got off the sidewalk on the Avenue and filled the street. They kept moving right along. Don't stop here. We've got to have open space. They showed the crowds along the sidewalks with their long clubs as well as they could. It was easy to see that there were not enough police to manage the crowd. Those who were forced to manage the crowd struggled to force the crowd off the sidewalk. The street and blocked it.
Mounted Police Charge the Crowd.
"Clear those streets," shouted Chief Child to the mounted officers. The men turned to the heads of their horses and charged for the heads of the crowds scrambled for the sidewalk. The middle of the streets were charged. But there was immediately a clear. The sidewalks. The officers could not manage the crowds without driving them in the street. The experiment of clearing the sidewalks and the streets together, a mile in the midst of this the people came to the open and the officers in all directions. They started off in all directions. They started off in all directions.

About 2000 people were present, including 35 comrades of Post 30, of which Fr. Scully is a member, in full uniform. The gymnasium was very prettily decorated with flags and bunting, and at the head of the floor space was a white monument, about 30 feet high, with the inscription in the centre, "FOR GOD AND COUNTRY."

Colonial style. Sideboard. In the Senate the farewell speeches, the leave taking, and the presentation of gifts were accompanied with more than usual feeling, for the reason that it was the last term of popular President Butler.

Mr. Durant of Middlesex offered a resolve extending to the President of the Senate the thanks of that body for his eminent fairness, sincerity and impartiality displayed by him throughout the session in the conduct of business. In seconding the resolve and speaking for their adoption, Mr. Durant paid high tribute to President Butler's ability. He reviewed the latter's legislative record. "His impartiality in all things has been marked and is worthy of special commendation," he said. "To his quick intelligence, sharp discernment and quick dispatch of business, is due, more than to anything else, the unusually early adjournment of the present session."

On behalf of the Senate Mr. Durant then presented to the President, as a mark of esteem, a magnificent colonial sideboard. "This token may perish or crumble to dust," said the Senator, "but the affectionate regard which offers it for your acceptance, and which will live in most precious memory, will endure as long as the Republic endures."

Mr. Corbett of Suffolk speaking eloquently for the minority in the chamber, eulogized the worth of the President in eloquent terms, and called upon to represent a larger constituency than he has yet represented, and that his reputation would not be local, but confined to the State alone, but national.

Messrs. Bessom of Essex and Southard of Bristol favored the resolution, which was unanimously adopted on a rising vote.

President Butler's speech.

President Butler spoke in response with great feeling. He said: "I am sincerely grateful to you for this token of your confidence and regard, and I appreciate deeply the many kind expressions to which utterance has been given."

We have labored together steadily, with devotion to public duty, for the many days of our session, and now we come to the day of our parting. With the respect and esteem which attend the association of men in the same high endeavor to perform public duty, I shall value always the beautiful gift as a token and mark of esteem and friendship."

The closing hours have not been in this magnificent chamber. The record of the old chamber for the past 100 years is ably and eloquently recalled by Mr. Durant on the opening day of the session. The Legislature for the next 100 years will not have an easy task to equal that of the 100 years, so complete in records that it found to the honor and credit of the State of Massachusetts.

This year the amount of business induced is about the same as that of the year, only in all probability the Blue Room will be much smaller, the Legislature will be killed about 50 more matters this year than last. We shall close our labors in a month earlier—not that in itself a recommendation, but the best results always attained by application and industry action and delays. Still, we will let others to judge us by our acts."

Some of the most important matters in which action was taken were as follows: Mr. Durant's bill, the Boston charter amendment of grade crossings by electric and steam railroads, and the consent of the Board of Railroad Commissioners.

Speech of Speaker Meyer.

Speaker Meyer in accepting the gift of Representatives, who appreciated kind thoughts which have prompted more than complimentary words said this afternoon and I feel much embarrassed, realizing I am not worthy of all that has been said and that everything is to your assistance and co-operation, I have endeavored to the best of my ability to fulfill the duties of the office to which I was elected. Change of Faction.

Then, too, the streets leading off Mantion Avenue were filled and had to be cleared every little while by the mounted police. The officials then saw that the only way to do was to form lines across Mantion Avenue, one at the corner of Delaine Street and the other some distance beyond Chaffee Street. This was done at 6 o'clock. Four big officers were stationed across the sidewalk in each place, and they began the work in each of keeping back the crowd. Some of the officers were sent beyond the line at Chaffee Street to keep the throng in motion. They succeeded fairly well.

The officers who attempted the same thing below Delaine Street did not succeed. The crowd Lore out to the curbstone at the sidewalk on Delaine Street and packed the Avenue for a hundred yards.

They could not be stirred. There were many women present, and every now and then they managed to squeeze their way to the front and out upon the street, some of them with their clothing disarranged from their position in the crush. Those who were forced out in this way were driven off up the street by the mounted officers. The crowd at the corner held firm. All this would have been well enough if there had not been a stream of people who insisted on passing the lines of their police. They had a mistaken idea of their rights, and they were bound to do what they ought to have seen was impossible.

The mill help came out at 6.30 and passed quietly on their various ways. The streets were clear about the gates, and the operatives were not long in hurrying away. They had almost passed out of sight from the gates when the storm burst.

The Trouble Thickens.

For 15 minutes before the exit of the people from the mills began a short, stout man of pugnacious instincts had been attempting to convince the police line at Delaine Street that he should be allowed to get through. The officers told him to go around Delaine Street. He would not do it. "This is a public street, and I want to go home," he said. "Go around Delaine Street," replied the officers. "You can't go this way," replied the man. "I want to go this way." The man then tried to block the street against the police. They took it good naturedly, but declined to let him go by. They were busy with others at the same time. The man, however, persisted in his arguments, and was finally hustled off the sidewalk. He was mixed up in the string for passing operatives at that moment. The crowd of strikers began to jeer at the operatives and

I shall value always the beautiful gift as a token and mark of esteem and friendship."

The closing hours have not been in this magnificent chamber. The record of the old chamber for the past 100 years is ably and eloquently recalled by Mr. Durant on the opening day of the session. The Legislature for the next 100 years will not have an easy task to equal that of the 100 years, so complete in records that it found to the honor and credit of the State of Massachusetts.

This year the amount of business induced is about the same as that of the year, only in all probability the Blue Room will be much smaller, the Legislature will be killed about 50 more matters this year than last. We shall close our labors in a month earlier—not that in itself a recommendation, but the best results always attained by application and industry action and delays. Still, we will let others to judge us by our acts."

Some of the most important matters in which action was taken were as follows: Mr. Durant's bill, the Boston charter amendment of grade crossings by electric and steam railroads, and the consent of the Board of Railroad Commissioners.

But if one wishes to appreciate what a profession library management has become, he will do well to read the article on "The Great Libraries of the United States" in the June Forum by Mr. Herbert Putnam, Librarian of the Boston Public Library. The writer possesses a remark- ably comprehensive familiarity with the his- tory of the scores of noted book collections and with their method of management, which he outlines clearly and at considera- ble length. One novel point elucidated in Mr. Putnam's paper is the fact that with the single exception of the country there is not now a single civil division of our gov- ernment that has not adopted the public library in some form as a part of its edu- cational work, nation, States, municipalities and towns having collections of their own. The prominence of the library as an ag- gressive factor in popular education and the development of the Librarian's duties into a profession by itself is shown by the require- ments of systematic training and associated study. There is an American Library As- sociation and a Library Journal. There are seven library schools in the country; and there are courses in bibliography and library enterprise at nine of our colleges. Library Librarian's post is just as certainly becom- ing a distinct and honorable profession.

If anybody looks for a quick trip this time for the St. Louis, he is bound to be disap- pointed. Safety and comfort are regularly put before speed by the managers of the American Line, and, besides, explicit and imperative instructions have been given to Capt. Randle to run no risk of injuring the new machinery by driving it. Later on, when bearings have become properly worn and everything is running smoothly, the St. Louis may prove herself a six-day ship, but it cannot be too strongly emphasized that she was not built as a record breaker. The laurels of the Campana, and Lucania are in no danger. Ordinarily, the New York and Paris, sailing on Wednesday, arrive the fol- lowing Wednesday on the other side. But Capt. Randle has been ordered on this first voyage not to attempt to reach Southamp- ton before Thursday at the earliest.

Some of our exchanges attribute the par- tial failure of the Pingree potato scheme in this vicinity to the fact that there are very few out of employment. This may be true to some extent, but there is also room for the belief that the people whom the authorities would help are too lazy to help themselves. —Newburyport News.

The Senate indorsed the action of the House in passing the Veterans' bill over the Governor's veto. There is to be no "reform" discrimination against old soldiers and sailors, therefore, and this is well. On the other hand, three vetoes handed into the Legislature by Mr. Greenleaf Tuesday were sustained. It is a pretty level-headed Legislature after all. —Worcester Spy.

NEW HAMPSHIRE CLUB DINNER.

Fifteen members of the New Hampshire Club sat down to dinner at the regular monthly meeting of the club at the Revere House yesterday afternoon.

President Charles McLean of Milton, N. H., presided and introduced the guests of the club, Mr. O'Brien of Lacombe, and Col. Henry O. Kien of Lowell, ex-Naval Officer of the Canadian Coast Guard.

Dr. L. H. Cobb, Secretary of the Con- gregational Church Building Society, said: "Had not this society in 1890 put $282 into Avalon, Cal.; $200 into Curtis, Ark.; in 1895; $1000 into the First Congregational Church of Denver; in 1870; $200 into Fremont, Kan.; in 1876; $500 into Genesee, Ind.; in 1890; $1252 into Haver- hill, Mass.; in 1895; $500 into Indiana, Neb.; in 1885; $226 into Jamestown, Ind.; in 1891; $300 into Kansas City, Mo.; in 1886; $300 into Lake Helen, Fla.; in 1889; $340 into Mis- souri, Wis.; in 1888; $41 into New Rich- land, Wis.; in 1888; $41 into O'Connell, Cal.; in 1884; $280 into Provo City, Utah; in 1880; $300 into Quincy, Ill.; in 1891; $400 into Richmond, N. Besides, if hard luck drives us to the dental chair, we are always struck with the skill and high learning of the best members of your profession. So, gentlemen, I am very glad to bring to you tonight, in the absence of the Governor, the cordial congratulations of the Commonwealth. (Applause.) Then, as abruptly as he had entered a few minutes before, the Lieutenant Governor departed.

The chief speaker of the evening—the annual orator, as the society had titled him—Rev. James DeNormande, expatiated upon the disappearance of the toothache. This led him to speak of the general up- lifting of human nature, in view of the new remedies for bodily ills. What benefit is it, he asked, to replace one class by another, so long as human nature remains the same? New ailments must be introduced. In the sight of God every individual grows as something to be uplifted, elevated, to start as something the result will come only with the full independence of mankind.

Dr. J. E. Chavens, who was also presented to the assembly, alluded to the great pleasure which his meeting with Massachu- setts dentists gave him.

The Day Session.

The opening session of the society was held at the lecture room of the Harvard Dental School on North Grove Street. Presi- dent Knight was in the chair.

At 9:30 the Councilors, representing the seven district societies of the State, were called to order. The subject of uniform State laws regarding the granting of cer- tificates of examination for practice was dis- cussed, and a committee, consisting of Dr. G. A. Maxfield of Holyoke, Dr. E. A. Stebb- ings of Shelburne Falls, and Dr. G. J. F. Harvard of Worcester were appointed to report a resolution on the subject.

The resolution advocating the formation of district associations throughout the country further to stimulate interest in the national association, was received, and the society voted to indorse the proposition and ex- tended aid to the movement.

Dr. R. R. Andrews of Cambridge, Dr. J. Shepard of Boston, Dr. S. G. Stevens of Boston, Dr. W. E. Boardman and Dr. G. E. Maxfield of Holyoke were appointed on the committee to nominate a member for recom- mendation to the Governor for the State Board of Registration in Dentistry.

Dr. John T. Codman, Dr. D. G. Harring- ton, Dr. S. J. McDougall of Boston and Dr. J. H. Kidder of Lawrence were elected to honorary membership.

At the afternoon meeting President Knight presented his annual report. Dur- ing the past year the State has been or- ganized into seven districts, each district having a separate organization. The north- eastern district was organized on April 1 with 10 members, and has since added seven new members; the north metropol- itan district was organized Jan. 18 with 30 members; the south metropolitan district was organized Feb. 28 with 80 members, and has since added Feb. 23 with 13 mem- bers; the central district was organized Jan. 25 with 11 members, and has since added two; the valley district was organized Jan. 20 with 10 members, and has since added Feb. 21 with one member, and has now a membership of 11. By reorganizing the State into districts the society has been en- abled to increase its membership from 108 to 215, a gain of 107, within a number of appli- cants no man fit to be a dentist.

The session will be continued today.

KENTUCKY REPUBLICANS.

They Meet in State Convention—Congressman Evans Introduces a Sound Currency Resolution—He Is Also Made Permanent Chairman.

Louisville, Ky., June 5.—The Republican State Convention was called to order this afternoon. The Auditorium Theatre was handsomely decorated. Nearly all the boxes of the theatre, with a seating capacity of 3000, was crowded with delegates and spectators.

At the right of the stage hung a portrait of Lincoln, over which was inscribed the motto: "Harmony our success." To the left was a picture of Gen. Grant, with the words: "In union there is strength."

When the convention adjourned for the afternoon, the delegates looked at the good resolutions contained in these inscriptions with interest.

An unexpected division had arisen in the committee on Resolutions over the silver plank, the committee being nearly equally divided as to the resolution offered by Col. Evans and those who favored a compromise.

The convention was called to order by Chairman Yerkes of the State Committee. After an address by Temporary Chairman George Denny, the following resolution was offered by Congressman Walter Evans of Louisville:

"We are opposed to the free and unlimited coinage of silver and believe in a sound currency and in the use of both gold and silver, provided always that a dollar in one is made precisely as valuable as a dollar in the other, gold being the standard."

A telegram from the managers of the Bimetallic Convention, which is to be held in Memphis June 23, which asked the Republicans to send delegates to the convention, was read by Chairman Denny. It was received with hisses, and was ordered laid on the table.

The committee on Organization announced that the Hon. Walter Evans of Louisville had been chosen permanent chairman. Col. Evans introduced and made a short address, telling the past few years' party had won the past few years.

His speech was well received. Pending the report of the Committee on Resolutions, several speeches were made by prominent Republicans. As this committee was not ready to report at 5:30 o'clock, the convention adjourned until 7:30 P. M.

THROUGH THE NEW CANAL.

The Kaiser's Yacht and a Big Liner Succesfully Steam Through.

Kiel, June 5.—The trial passage through the Baltic-Nea Sea Canal was made by the Emperor's yacht Hohenzollern, with Prince Henry of Prussia on board, today. The trip was in every respect successful. The Hamburg-American Line steamer Palatia also passed through the canal, having on board Chancellor Hohenlohe, Dr. von Boetticher, Vice President of the Imperial Ministry; Herr von Koeller, Prussian Minister of the Interior; Baron von Bredenstein, Imperial Minister of Foreign Affairs; Count von Helldorf, other prominent persons.

No hitch occurred in any particular. Southampton, June 5.—The officers of the American and Italian war ships anchored in this harbor were entertained at luncheon by the Mayor of Southampton today. Admiral Kirkwood, in response to a toast, made a very happy speech in which he related an amusing story of his recent adventures in the Mediterranean.

ARRESTED ON A SERIOUS CHARGE.

New Bedford, Mass., June 5.—Dr. Ezekiel H. Noble was arrested this afternoon at his office, on Purchase Street, by inspectors Hathaway and Parker on a warrant charging him with criminal malpractice on April 30, on the person of Miss Laura A. Alden.

ASKS FOR AN ACCOUNTING.

Mrs. Faunie D. Way Sued for $40,000 by Keystone Mining Company.

The bill in equity brought by the Keystone Hydraulic Mining Company v. Mrs. Faunie D. Way, executrix of the will of the late John M. Way, was called up yesterday in the Supreme Court, before Judge Knowlton, upon a plea filed against its maintenance by the defendant. The suit is brought to have the court order the defendant, as executrix of her husband's will, to account for $40,000, which he is alleged to have received in his lifetime from a sale of the mining property of the company while he was Vice President and Manager.

Mr. Way was a lawyer of this city, quite well known among the members of the legal profession. He died in the year 1893, and was reputed to have left considerable property. In 1882, 1883 and 1884, when Mr. Way was a stockholder, the plaintiff alleges that it owned several mines in San Miguel county, Colorado. In these years the general management of the company is alleged to have been given to Mr. Way, until his death. It is alleged that he got $10,000 worth of gold by the operation of the mines, and is also alleged to have accounted for it.

It is also alleged that he procured notes from the company, amounting to $3500, and that two months later he paid $18,382 for the same, and the other for $3000, and that he was bearing interest at 5 per cent. The indebtedness of the company, it is alleged, however, that he fraudulently procured these notes to obtain control of the company, and that on April 2, 1893, he brought suit in Colorado upon these notes and obtained an attachment of the company's property.

The plaintiff alleges that the books of the company are in the possession of the defendant, as executrix, and asks that she be ordered to deliver them over to it. It also alleges that the money received by Mr. Way from the sale of the property has come to her hands in that same capacity, and that she is liable to it, and an accounting against her is sought.

The plea filed by the defendant claims that the suit is barred by the Statute of Limitations; also that the plaintiff has been guilty of laches, and, lastly, that the suit does not survive as against this defendant, who died legally when Mr. Way died.

Gilman, co-plaintiff, J. W. Keith and C. F. Eldredge for defendant.

CHILDREN'S TRIBUTE.

Pupils of St. Mary's School, Cambridge, Do Honor to Union Dead.

A beautiful memorial service was held by the children of St. Mary's School at the Fr. Scully Gymnasium, Cambridgeport, last evening. The occasion was termed "Children's tribute to those who died to save the Union."

About 200 people were present, including 35 comrades of Post 30, of which Fr. Scully is a member, in full uniform. The gymnasium was very prettily decorated with flags and bunting, and at the head of the floor space was a white monument about 30 feet high, with the inscription in the center, "For God and Country."

Rev. Fr. Scully presided, and the exercises were wholly by the children, the chorus comprising several classes.

MEN WERE THERE.

Hits Came With Runs in Sight and Cincinnati Took the Game.

Brooklyn, June 5.—The rejuvenated Foreman proved too much for the Brooklynites today, allowing them only five scattering hits, including a home run by Corcoran. Daub pitched good ball, but the visitors managed to make their hits with men on the bases. Gumbert was sent in to pitch at the beginning of the seventh inning, and only one hit was made off him. Miller's batting and the fielding of Smith, McPhee, Corcoran and Daub, with a one-handed sensational stop by Shindle, were the features. Attendance, 2000. The score:

to win the game. After Cross had been fired on a hit to Nichols, Mack got his base on balls. Killen followed with a clean swing to center, Mack going to second. Donovan then hit a high fly to short right center. Duffy was playing short left center, and as he failed to get to the ball, both Mack and Killen ran home, while Donovan's fly ball sprang into the hands of McCarthy and Duffy both moved over toward right field to play for Clingman and he fooled them by hitting to the left field fence, making two bases on a hit which would ordinarily have been an out. Donovan trotted home. The next two men went out, Beckley on a well-caught fly to Bannan and Stenzel on a "grounder" to Nash.

Nyve opened Boston's third with a fly to Stenzel, and then Killen gave Ganzel and Nichols their bases. Lowe's best effort was a fly to Bierbauer. Bannan was given a hand for encouragement, and responded with a double to left near the foul line, sending Ganzel across the plate and the foul line to third. Duffy banged a hard one at Clingman, but that worthy made a good stop and closed the inning.

In the next three innings neither side scored, though the Bostonians had ample opportunities. They had men on the bases in all three innings. In the fourth McCarthy, and Nash drove a terrific "grounder" at Clingman, which he found too hot to handle. McCarthy made a good stop at third, and Nash moved up to second at the same time. The crowd was keyed up in full expectation of runs, but they were doomed to bitter disappointment. Tucker struck out. Nyve popped up a fly to Bierbauer and Ganzel died at first on a ground hit to Beckley. In the next inning after two men were out Bannan drove a "scorching" down the third base line for two bases, and Duffy followed with a slow hit to Cross, which he beat out. McCarthy's effort was a fly to Donovan, and again the Bostonians were balked.

The "Pirates" made their fourth run in the seventh inning. Cross drove a hot "liner" to left. McCarthy tried his best to get the ball on the fly, but was going so fast that he could not even smother it. The ball went far out into the field, and Cross made third before it was fielded in. He scored on an infield out.

The Bostonians gave signs of a Garrison finish in the last half of the ninth, but it fizzled out badly. Ganzel started off with a clean base hit to right, and Nichols followed him with a base on balls. Lowe hit safely to left and a fast runner could have scored easily on second, but as in. Bannan and excitement upon the score of the game and a hit to Cross, Ganzel scored and Nichols going to third. Duffy then was the hope of the crowd, but he failed. He hit to Clingman, who held Nichols on third and threw, out Duffy. McCarthy had the last chance and he closed the game with a long fly to Donovan at right center.

The Bostonians had men on the bases in every inning of the game, and had eleven men left, while the Pirates had six. The score:

For a man naturally appeals to people who have suffered keenly from the ineffectiveness of the treatment received from foreign diplomats, but it cannot be accomplished until the people of the five States are willing and anxious to do away with their grasping habit of clinging to offices for unreasonably long periods. When a party is out of office it often resorts to the lowest and most dangerous devices to overthrow the existing Government. Lawlessness and bloodshed are happening much less common than they used to be in Central America, but the recent bitterness against President Zelaya shows that the Latin Americanists are still allowed to do too much violence among the leadership. Civilization has advanced materially since the former union and the Latin-Americanists have shown themselves capable and capable of self-government. The life and character of the eminent Morazan have been obscured themes since the downfall of the Republic in 1839, and his efforts to keep the States together have been more and more regarded as time has gone by. There is a growing sentiment that union must come sooner or later, but whether it does or not, this country has nothing but the warmest respect and hearty sympathy for the Isthmus States.

nearly 6000 public libraries in this country controlling the institutions must require considerable intellectual grasp and business acumen. But if one wishes to appreciate what a profession library management has become, he will do well to read the article on "The Great Libraries of the United States" in the June Forum by Mr. Herbert Putnam, Librarian of the Boston Public Library. The writer possesses a remarkably comprehensive familiarity with the history of the scores of noted book collections and with their method of management, which he outlines clearly and at considerable length. One novel point elucidated in Mr. Putnam's paper is the fact that with the single exception of the county there is not now a single civil division of our government that has not adopted the public library in some form as a part of its educational work, nation, States, municipalities and towns having collections of their own. The prominence of the library as an aggressive factor in popular education and the development of the Librarian's duties into a profession by itself is shown by the requirements of systematic training and associated study. There is an American Library Association and a Library Journal. There are seven library schools in the country; and there are courses in bibliography and library economy at nine of our colleges. Library enterprise is certainly spreading and the Librarian's post is just as certainly becoming a distinct and honorable profession.

If anybody looks for a quick trip this time for the St. Louis, he is bound to be disappointed. Safety and comfort are regularly put before speed by the managers of the American Line, and, besides, explicit and imperative instructions have been given to Capt. Randle to run no risk of injuring the new machinery by driving it. Later on, when hearings have become properly worn and everything is running smoothly, the St. Louis may prove herself a six-day ship, but it cannot be too strongly emphasized that she was not built as a record breaker. The laurels of the Campanile and Lucania are in no danger. Ordinarily, the New York and Paris, sailing on Wednesday, arrive the following Wednesday on the other side. But Capt. Randle has been ordered on this first voyage not to attempt to reach Southampton before Thursday at the earliest.

After more than 30 years' efforts an Albany man has effected a settlement for 35 cents from the United States Navy Department. He took pity upon the deficit jugglers in Washington and had the check framed instead of cashed.

The law passed by the New York Aldermen requiring all passenger vehicles to carry lights between sunset and sunrise looks like a great victory for the wheelmen.

NOTES FROM THE STATE PRESS.

Newburyport can and will honor itself by honoring Mr. Moody of Haverhill. There will really be no other candidate in the field.

Some of our exchanges attribute the partial failure of the Pingree potato scheme in this vicinity to the fact that there are very few out of employment. This may be true to some extent, but there is also room for the belief that the people whom the authorities would help are too lazy to help themselves.—Newburyport News.

COL. POPE BUYS.

The new owner of the property is Col. Albert A. Pope, the President of the company, who purchases the estate for investment.

The Evening Star says of Mr. Olney: "Nobody looks for the slightest change in the Administration's policy. Things are expected to go on almost as if death had not knocked at the department's door. Mr. Olney is not politically ambitious, nor does he confer with politicians, strictly so called. The idea is that he will address himself solely to the task of keeping the Administration's record consistent and coherent on the lines already adopted with regard to foreign affairs, and to round up the four years with the manifestation of as little interest as possible in questions outside the confines of the United States. This one point is noted.

"Will it increase the New England opposition to the Administration's foreign policy to have a New England man at the head of the State Department? Mr. Olney, in the Attorney General's office, consenting to certain acts, was one individual. Mr. Olney as Secretary of State, will be another, and apparently a more responsible individual, will Senators Frye and Hale, Lodge and Hoar, Hawley and Platt, and particularly Chandler, be aroused by the change to more vigorous denunciation than they have heretofore indulged in?"

Mr. Doane of the Pullman Car Company is now in the city, and it is currently reported that he is here entirely in the interest of Judge Thomas Moran of Chicago for the Attorney Generalship. Mr. Doane is a personal friend of the President, and stands high in his esteem.

REMOVAL OF C. B. MORTON.

A Bitter Enemy of Mr. Blaine and a Former Favorite of Cleveland Has a Downfall.

(Special Dispatch to the Boston Journal.)

Washington, June 5.—The friends of the late James G. Blaine have reason to remember the virulent attacks of Charles B. Morton of Maine upon both Mr. Blaine and his family. Yet President Cleveland appointed him to important bureau places under both of his Administrations. But the end has come. A sensation was caused in the Treasury Department today by the summary removal of Charles B. Morton, Auditor for the Navy Department. He received a communication from the President about noon notifying him, of his removal from office, and he at once packed up his private effects, and bidding good-by to his official associates, left the building without making the slightest effort for a hearing. No explanation for this action is given beyond the statement that Mr. Morton's administration was not satisfactory to the President.

There has been constant friction between Mr. Morton and the officials of the Navy Department, with whom he did business, and Secretary Herbert repeatedly complained of his action. It is said, furthermore, that Mr. Morton has been caustic and abusive in his criticisms of the political actions of the President and Secretary Carlisle. Mr. Morton is a prominent Democratic politician of Maine, and was a bitter personal enemy of ex-Secretary Blaine. He was Commissioner of Navigation under Cleveland's first Administration, and was appointed Auditor for the Navy Department soon after Mr. Cleveland came in for the second time. Two years ago Mr. Cleveland again appointed Mr. Morton to the position. It is alleged that Mr. Morton wrote improper letters regarding the President and Secretary Carlisle to his friends. The letters, it was rumored, were written both during Mr. Morton's former connection with the department and since he has been an auditor of the Treasury. These rumors were looked into.

"THE RIVALS."

It has been decided to give "The Rivals" at the Boston Theatre on the afternoon of the 13th inst., exactly as it was given at the benefit gotten up for that worthy old repetitions of the comedy. But this the actors would not agree to, but they were prevailed upon to consent to giving a performance of the comedy in this city. Much of the success of the presentation was due to Mr. Jefferson, who worked hard and faithfully and who rehearsed what is undoubtedly the strongest comedy cast ever brought together for over two weeks. The cast of the play will be as follows:—

Bob Acres, Mr. Jefferson; Sir Anthony Absolute, William H. Crane; Sir Lucius O'Trigger, Nat. C. Goodwin; Captain Absoluter, Henry Miller; Faulkland, Thomas W.
